

Michael Orleans Bio

Michael Kojo Orleans from Cape Coast Ghana West Africa, has been a community leader for more than 10 years, and has served as a Director of Positive Footprints GHANA, a non-profit, non-governmental organization. This organization works to establish the foundations of long lasting, sustainable and quality community programs through skilled and unskilled volunteers. In this role, Michael works directly with groups and individuals committed to leaving a lasting positive impact in important areas such as education, healthcare, orphanage care, sports, and conservation in Ghana.

He is now the country director for Seccom Foundation International Ghana. He is dedicated to economic empowerment, educational support, volunteering, social intervention programs, and fundraising to support local schools and orphanage homes. As a professional tour guide, he solicits for additional support for educational needs of young and vulnerable girls in nearby villages and deprived communities. He has pioneered many programs to serve these communities building schools in Brenu village, near Elmina and Bruku and Bonkro, both farming communities in New Edubiase, near Kumasi. Michael holds a Diploma in Computer Hardware and Network Engineering and a Certificate in Tour Guiding Skills, leadership skills and Data Entry, his current project is working for Seccom Foundation International to build a modern classroom blocks for people of Simew and other communities and tourism development in Ghana.